Cal Brown Featured as Tax Expert on WTTG-FOX5 in Washington, D.C.

McLean, VA (March 16, 2007) – Tune in Monday, March 19, 2007 during the 6p.m. WTTG-FOX5 news broadcast, in the Washington, D.C.-area, to watch a television segment featuring Cal Brown, vice president of The Monitor Group. Cal Brown was chosen by WTTG-FOX5 for this television segment based on his experience in dealing with tax issues. The segment discusses various issues taxpayers will face this year, among them how to take advantage of tax breaks.

During this segment Cal will discuss proactive ways consumers can shelter their money from taxes including maxing out corporate sponsored retirement plans, selling underperforming stocks and turning personal hobbies into a business. Additionally, Cal discusses two ways in which consumers give up control of their money to garner a tax deduction. This segment is the first in a series discussing various tax strategies, law changes, things to look for when hiring a tax professional, and the most common tax mistakes consumers make.

“During this time of year it is vital all consumers know and understand their options in regards to their taxes,” said Glenn Kautt, president of The Monitor Group. “By watching this segment, consumers will gain greater insight into these options. When in doubt, consumers should always consult their financial advisor.”

Cal is also completing his Masters of Science in Taxation at American University in Washington, D.C. In case you missed it, Glenn Kautt was also featured in a segment on WTTG-FOX5 on January 18, 2007 speaking about identity theft. Glenn discussed three specific activities to help minimize identity theft, or the 3 “D”s, deter, detect and defend.
